MGBallard Designs

M.G. Ballard creates leather apparel and home accessories that mirror both her sense of humanity and sense of humor. From the celebration of sisterhood echoed in her "Sandwalk" collection, to the novel look at the beauty industry that underlies her "High Heels and Hairdos" series, M.G. creates colorful commentary about life and all its drama.

"When women wear my clothing, says M.G. Ballard, without speaking, they say to those they meet... I am here! Look at me and see what I feel about myself and the world."

About Leather
Every leather garment is, in part, a reflection of nature. Leather is animal skin which is subject to blemishes, scarring and other natural occurrences that create inconsistencies in the textures and colors of the finished hides. These are not defects, but characteristics of genuine leather.

Brochure

M.G. Ballard, a native of Michigan, grew up in Akron, Ohio. After studying fine art at the University of Akron she moved to Indianapolis, Indiana, and opened a custom design salon. In 1984, the designer was honored with a nomination for the More Fashion Awards in New York and debuted as a wearable artist, specializing in painted textiles, at the Winter's Magic Artists Exhibition.

In 1987, she was offered a position working on the Fashion Merchandising program at Tuskegee University. She made numerous contributions as an instructor, and eventually coordinator of the program and was honored with Outstanding Faculty Awards for both teaching and service.

In 1998, she returned to her passion designing leather and mixed-textile coats and jackets which are made-to-order and sold on-line and through trunk showings at boutiques and private homes. Ballard's designs are owned by several celebrities and professional women across the country. Her work has been featured in several national magazines and newspapers.

In addition to her work as a designer, she applies her talents to more pure forms of art in the creation of original mixed-media wall hangings and pillows.
